

ENSURING EARLY TESTING AND TREATMENT IN ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive neurodegenerative condition.

The disease is devastating to the millions of patients, families and communities it impacts.

The fight for a cure continues, but patients can benefit now from advances in care.

Alzheimer's disease can now be recognized and treated earlier, slowing its progression and symptoms.

Policymakers can help ensure earlier detection and treatment by:

Increasing awareness and destigmatizing the disease

Expanding cognitive screening

Ensuring access to biomarker tests and other diagnostics

Improving coverage for FDA-approved treatments

Early diagnosis and treatment allow patients to plan their future and care path better.

Alzheimer's patients deserve timely access to care.

Alliance for Patient Access